Exiled to Earth
R. A. Montgomery

Choose from 17 ENDINGS!
You are an alien from the planet Orac.

On Orac, there are two intelligent species, the Wikzams and the Zorvogs. They are different species, but they live together in peace. You are a Wikzam, but your two best friends, Og and Mu, are Zorvogs.

The Zorvogs are tall, thin, and hairless. They have big eyes and green skin. Zorvogs are curious and friendly, almost childlike. They are also very strong.

Wikzams are shorter than Zorvogs, with light purple skin and pointed ears. Most Wikzams live quiet, simple lives. However, you are very different from most Wikzams. You love to try new and exciting things.

The Zorvogs and the Wikzams have lived together in peace for thousands of years. In that time, they built huge, beautiful cities that cover most of Orac. These cities are clean and safe, but—to you—they are a little boring.

To you, there is one place in Orac where it is not boring. It is a place where no one ever goes. It is still wild, like all of Orac used to be. It is dark and dangerous, and full of strange species. This place is called the Forbidden Zone.

One day, you talk Og and Mu into going to the Forbidden Zone with you. “It will be fun,” you tell them. “We can come back in a few hours. No one will know!”

Soon, the three of you are waiting for the ship that will take you to the Forbidden Zone. You are very excited.
A few hours later, you, Og, and Mu are deep inside the Forbidden Zone. It is just as exciting as you hoped. Everything is so different here, so alive! It's just like the picture books you read in school. The smells, the sounds—it feels like you're on another planet.

After a few hours of walking, you stop near a river. You and Og look across the river, while Mu climbs a tree to get some wild fruit. Suddenly, Mu shouts to you.

"Hey, guys! Look over there!" she says. "On the other side of that river! There's a building in those trees!"

You and Og look. Sure enough, there's a large, flat building on the other side. It looks very old.

"There shouldn't be any buildings in the Forbidden Zone," you say to Og. "Let's take a closer look!"

Soon, the three of you are on the other side of the river, walking around the strange building. As you walk, you hear a scary animal sound from deep in the forest.

"That sounds like a land dragon," Og says.

"Oh, no, we're in trouble," you say. "Land dragons are the most dangerous species on Orac."

"Whatever it is, it sounds like it's getting closer," Mu adds, nervously. "Let's get out of here!"
At that moment, you see a huge door on the side of the building, just a few meters away. "Look, guys, over there!" you shout. "It's a door! Let's go in!"

As quickly as you can, the three of you pull the door open and go in. As the door closes behind you, something big and heavy hits the other side. "Wow, that was close!" you say.

However, your friends don't answer. They are looking around, their mouths hanging open in surprise.

You are in a huge, open room. Above you is the yellow sky of Orac, and all around are...warships!

Continue to the next page.
“Where are we?” you whisper in surprise.

At first, no one speaks. After a few seconds, Mu answers, “I think this is an old war base,” she says. “These look like warships from the Forgotten Time!”

“What?” Og asks. “That’s crazy! The Forgotten Time was thousands of years ago. These warships look almost new!”

“Look!” you shout, pointing at one large warship in the far corner. “That one still has its lights on. I wonder if there’s anyone inside.”

You run towards the huge warship, with Og and Mu following close behind.
You reach the warship. Like all the others, it is deadly looking and gray. However, unlike the other warships, this one is on. There is a soft light coming from the cockpit windows, and a very low humming sound coming from the engines.

“How can it have power after so many years?” you ask.

“Solar engines,” Mu says. “I guess someone forgot to turn this one off.”

“Are these Orac warships?” you ask.

“It looks like it,” Og says. “Look here,” he adds, pointing to some writing on one of the legs of the warship. “There’s some writing here, in the old Zorvog language.”

You learned in school that war ended on Orac thousands of years ago. That time is now called the Forgotten Time because no one really remembers what happened. The stories say that Orac was attacked by an alien species from another planet, and that the Zorvogs and the Wikzams worked together to save the planet.

No one knows for sure what happened. What you do know is that, after the war, Orac decided to give up war completely. The Zorvogs and Wikzams gave up all their weapons and warships, and the two species have lived in peace since then. That’s why you are so surprised to find this war base—there are no war bases on Orac!
“Do you think this warship can fly?” asks Mu.

“There’s only one way to find out,” you say. “Let’s go inside!”

You walk under the big warship and quickly find the round door above you, on the bottom of the ship. The door is too high for you to reach it. However, when you stand under it, you hear a soft beep from inside the warship. A moment later, the door opens by itself, and a strong blue force-field pulls you up into the warship!

“Come on, guys!” you call down to your friends from the open door. “Let’s fly this thing out of here and back into the city. That way, we don’t have to worry about the land dragons. Besides, everyone will be excited about our find. We’ll be heroes!”

“I’m not so sure about that,” Og says. “Remember, this is the Forbidden Zone. We shouldn’t even be here. Maybe we should go back the way we came. I’m sure that land dragon is gone by now.”

You are about to make your first choice! Make your choice before you turn the page.

If you try to fly the warship back to the city, turn to page 8.

If you decide to go back the way you came, turn to page 16.