Chapter One

The Ground Rules

“Let’s get started,” Posey says calmly. The animals keep talking. I guess I will have to try again, she thinks.

Posey is a tiny frog with a big voice. “Let’s get started,” she says louder.

All the animals freeze. They look at one another, and then they look at Posey. All the animals are scared of her. They know that the poison dart frog could make them very sick if she wanted to.

“Sorry, Posey,” says Jag. The jaguar is not easily frightened, but she is scared of Posey.

Posey starts again. “Good, I have your attention. Let me remind you of the ground rules for the meeting. No eating the animal next to you. No thinking about eating the animal next to you.”

“Did you hear that, Jag?” says Cappy, a large capybara. He points to his eye patch. “I do not want to almost be your lunch again.”

Jag rolls her eyes at the large rodent. “Run faster next time.”

Posey clears her throat. “We have important things to talk about—our home.”

Chapter Two

A Big Problem

Mack, a large macaw, speaks up. “I agree, Posey. Let’s talk about what happened to our home. I didn’t like moving.”

“Neither did I,” replies Posey. “These humans definitely have to be stopped. They can’t just cut down trees in our forest. And then, they set fires! That is no way to treat anyone’s home.”

“Calm down, tiny one,” says Jag. “Yes, we had to move, but it won’t happen again.”

Frog and Friends Save the Day
