Chapter One

No Ordinary Morning

Daniella Darvish was an ordinary girl. She loved to jump in puddles, climb trees, and listen to music with her parents.

But today, she didn't feel ordinary when she woke up. As soon as Daniella sat up in her bed, she could tell something was different.

"Hmm," she said aloud, reaching for her lamp. But instead of feeling her lamp, her hand passed straight through it!

"What?" she cried. Again, she reached toward the lamp. Her hand went straight through the shade. "Ahh!" she cried.

Was this a dream? She looked around her room. Everything else seemed normal. She pinched herself to see if she was still asleep.

“Ouch!” Oh no! It wasn’t a dream after all! It was actually happening.

“Daniella, are you ready?” her dad called out. “Hurry, or you’ll be late for school!”

She could smell breakfast cooking downstairs. Her stomach rumbled. But how would she eat if she couldn’t hold a fork?

Before Daniella could think about it more, her entire body sank through her bed and the floor.

Chapter Two

Close Call

Daniella fell lightly onto a kitchen chair. She was a whole floor below her bedroom. Thankfully, her dad was still frying the eggs and didn't notice!

"Oh, there you are," he said, putting a fried egg on her plate. "Eat up!"

But Daniella wasn't hungry. She was freaking out! She seemed to be back to normal. She picked up her fork.

Did I just sink through the floor? she thought. This is too weird!

"I'm going to get ready for school, Dad," Daniella said.
