A Not-So-Snowy Surprise

"Can you believe it's finally here?" I ask my twin brother.

Tyler shakes his head with so much excitement I think his head might fly off his neck.

"I know! I can't wait to ride in the gondola and play in the snow!" Tyler says, giddy as he plops down on my bed.

"I can't wait to get on the slopes!" I reply.

Tyler and I have been looking forward to this ski trip for a long time. Six months ago, our parents surprised us by saying we'd be taking a trip to a ski resort in early November. Ever since then, we have been counting down the days.

Mom peeps her head into my room. "Kaitlyn and Tyler, please start winding down. It's almost bedtime. We've got to get up pretty early to catch our flight, so I don't want to see your lights on past nine o'clock. I'll be back in 20 minutes to make sure!" she warns.

"We know," we say in unison. We giggle to each other, and Tyler heads to his room.

The next morning, after what felt like the longest flight ever, we finally get to our rental car and drive to the resort. The longer we're in the car, the more I start to notice something kind of…weird. It isn't nearly as cold as I thought it would be.

Oh well, I think to myself. I'll get my fill of cold weather once we get to the resort. And then it's ski heaven!

But as we get closer and closer, there's still no snow.

"It is a bit warm for this time of year. Looks like the snow might be a little late," Dad says. Tyler and I shoot worried glances at each other.

I start to question how much fun a snowless ski trip could be.
