TALK ABOUT TEXTS

How the Kiwi Lost His Wings

Retold by Sara Fernando Illustrated by Fraser Williamson

How the Kiwi Lost His Wings

A Maori Legend

For Review Only

Retold by Sara Fernando

Illustrated by Fraser Williamson

macmillan education

One day, Tane Mahuta (tah-nay mah-hoo-tah), the Father of Trees, was watching over his children, the plants.
He saw bugs on the forest floor.
They had been eating the plants.

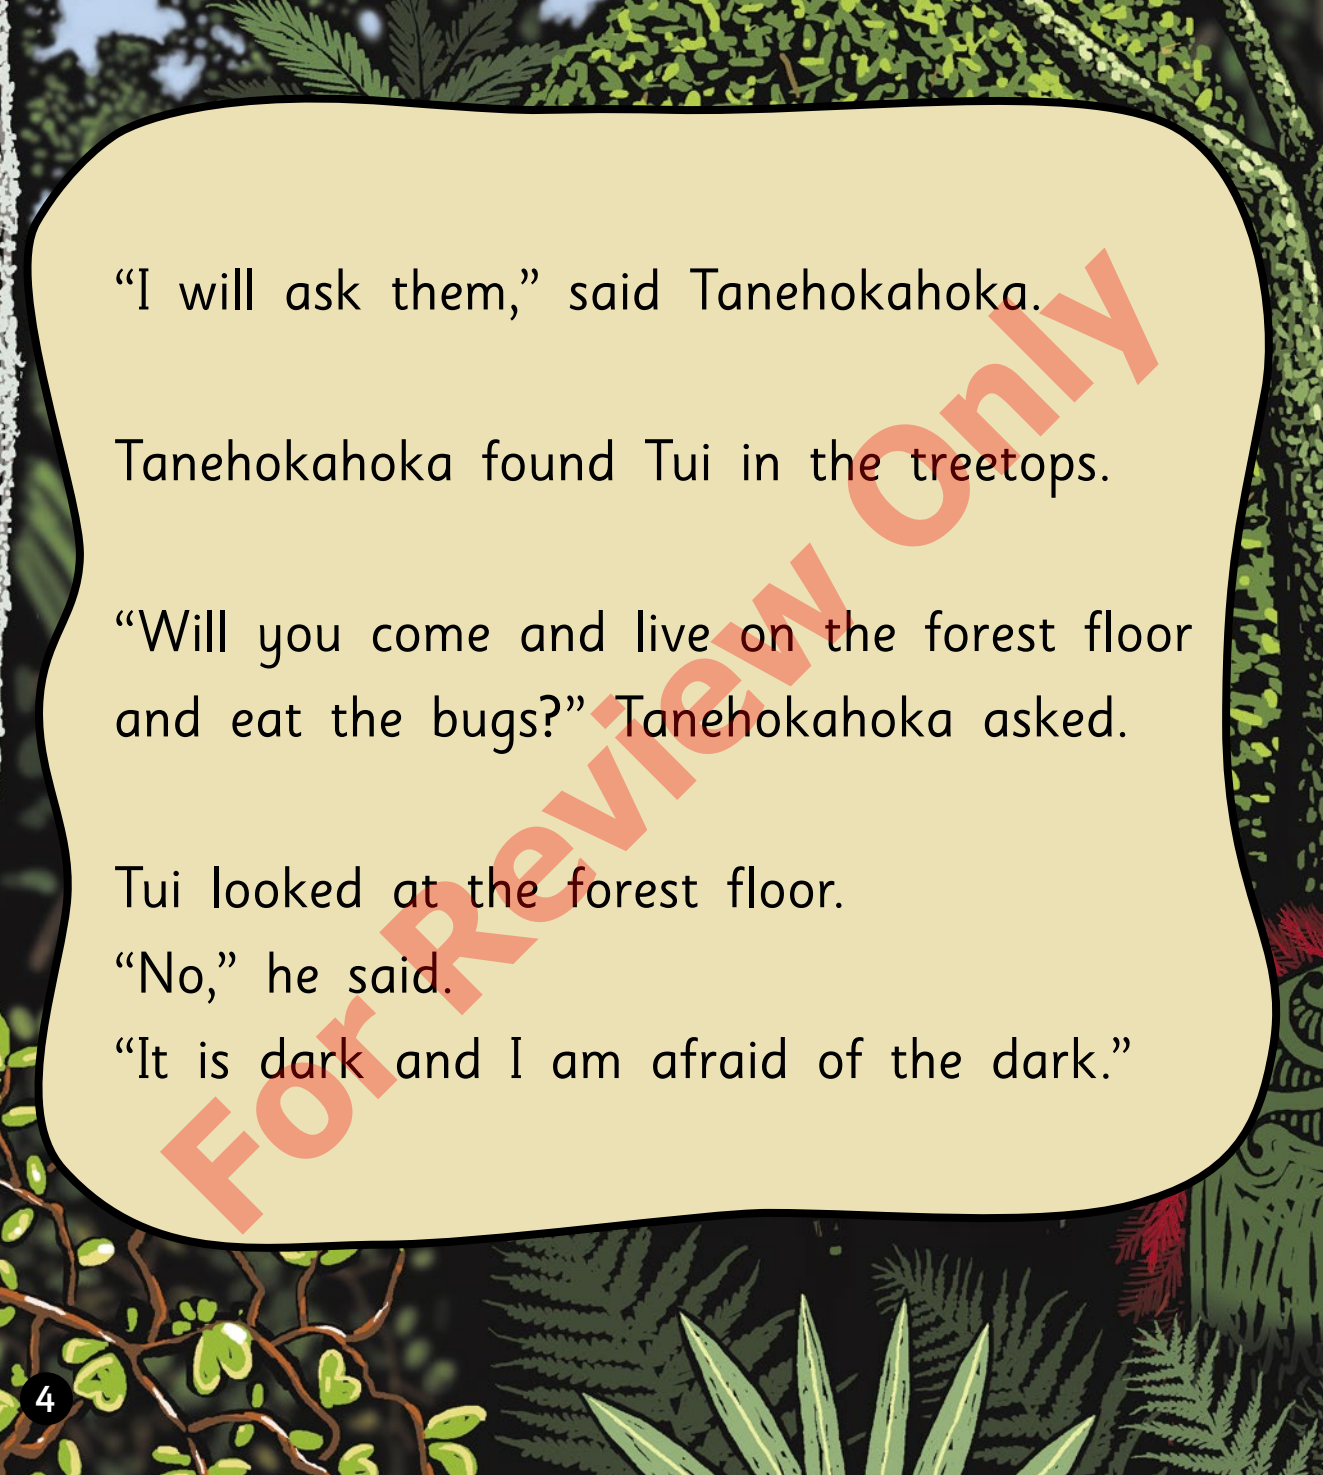

Tane Mahuta went around to talk with Tanehokahoka (tah-nay-ho-kah-ho-kah), the Father of Birds.

"Will your children, the birds, live on the forest floor and eat the bugs?"
Tane Mahuta asked.

For Review Only

For Review Only

"I will ask them," said Tanehokahoka.

Tanehokahoka found Tui in the treetops.

"Will you come and live on the forest floor and eat the bugs?" Tanehokahoka asked.

Tui looked at the forest floor.
"No," he said.
"It is dark and I am afraid of the dark."

For Review Only

For Review Only