
TALK ABOUT TEXTS
My Day as a Superhero
J
Written by Gordon Coutts Illustrated by Scott Fraser

My Day as a Superhero

Written by Gordon Coutts

Illustrated by Scott Fraser

For Review Only

macmillan education

Jasmine was walking home from school. She passed a small playground with broken swings. She passed a woman putting up posters about her missing cat. She wondered what she could do to fix her town's problems.

"I wish I could make things better," she thought. "But I'm just a kid. I don't know if I can help."

Suddenly, a huge streak of light flashed across the sky and hit the ground.

For Review Only

For Review Only

Jasmine saw someone lying in a big hole in the ground. It was Atomic Pigeon, the town's superhero!

"Hey, can you help me, please?" Atomic Pigeon said. "I'm so tired from all my superhero jobs that I crash-landed. I'm so tired I can hardly move! Could you look after things while I take a rest? I'll lend you some superpowers. I've seen you being kind to people around town. You would make a great superhero."

For Review Only

For review only