
Saving the Parrots
Written by Diana Noonan
Illustrated by Bridget Monro

Jo went to visit her grandma.
She travelled a long way by plane.
Grandma lived in a small house
near a big forest.
Jo loved the parrots
that lived in the forest.

However, Grandma was worried.
"I remember hearing many more parrots
in the forest last year," she said.
"This year I can only hear a few."

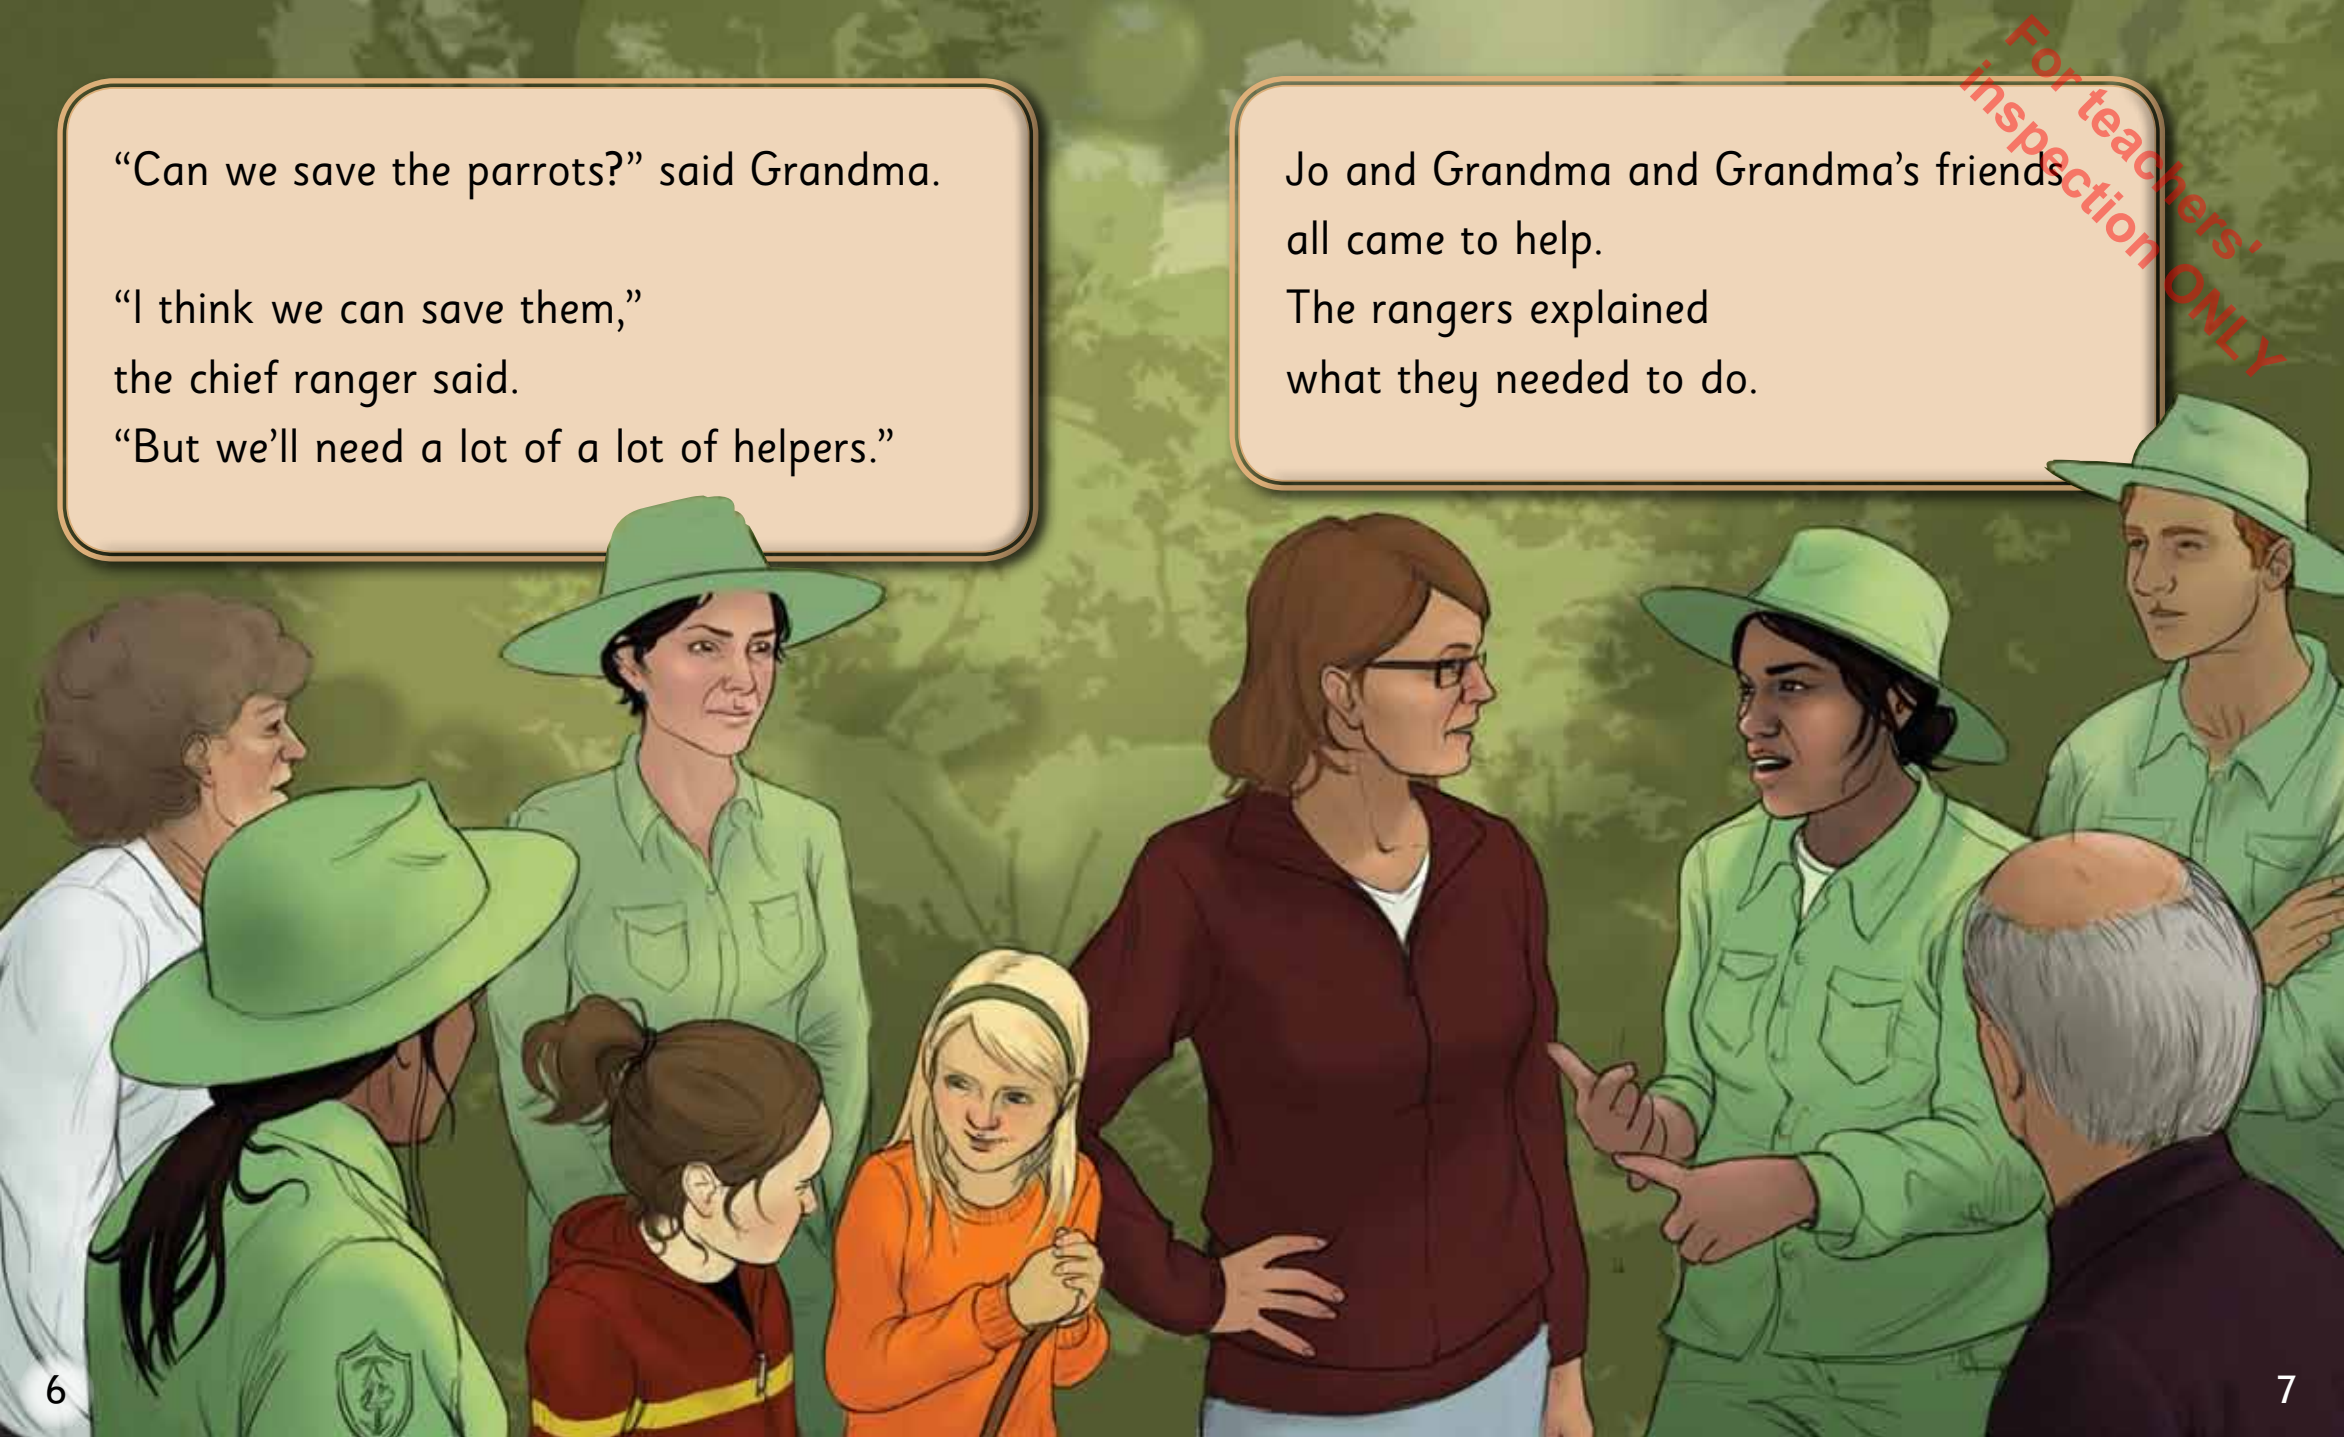

For teachers' inspection ONLY

Grandma and Jo went to see
the forest rangers.
"They will tell us what is wrong,"
Grandma said.

The rangers soon found the problem.
"There are rats in the forest,"
said the chief ranger.
"They eat the parrots' eggs.
There are wild cats, too.
They eat the chicks."

For teachers' inspection ONLY

For teachers' inspection ONLY