

Grumpy Grandpa Monkey's chance encounter with a little stone, which turns out to be a chatty bird, snaps him out of his sadness as he is once again able to enjoy the mountain and its seasons.

HIGO WU

Higo Wu was born in Taipei, Taiwan. Before becoming an author of picture books, he worked as a book reviewer. Wu enjoys telling stories for children and adults. Living all his life on a multicultural island, he believes no one is an island because stories, ancient or modern, will connect us all.

KIKO YANG

Kiko Yang was born in Pingtung, Taiwan. After graduating from university, he traveled to Spain and learned painting and pottery by chance. Twenty years later, he moved back to his hometown with his Japanese wife. They opened a small wabi-sabi style coffee shop by a fish farm. He also designs covers for magazines and illustrates picture books.

The SONG of Little Stone
Higo Wu Kiko Yang

ADVANCE READING COPY

The SONG of Little Stone

WRITTEN BY Higo Wu
ILLUSTRATED BY
Kiko Yang

REYCRAFT BOOKS

The SONG of Little Stone

Written by Higo Wu
Illustrated by Kiko Yang

For Review Only

ADVANCE READING COPY

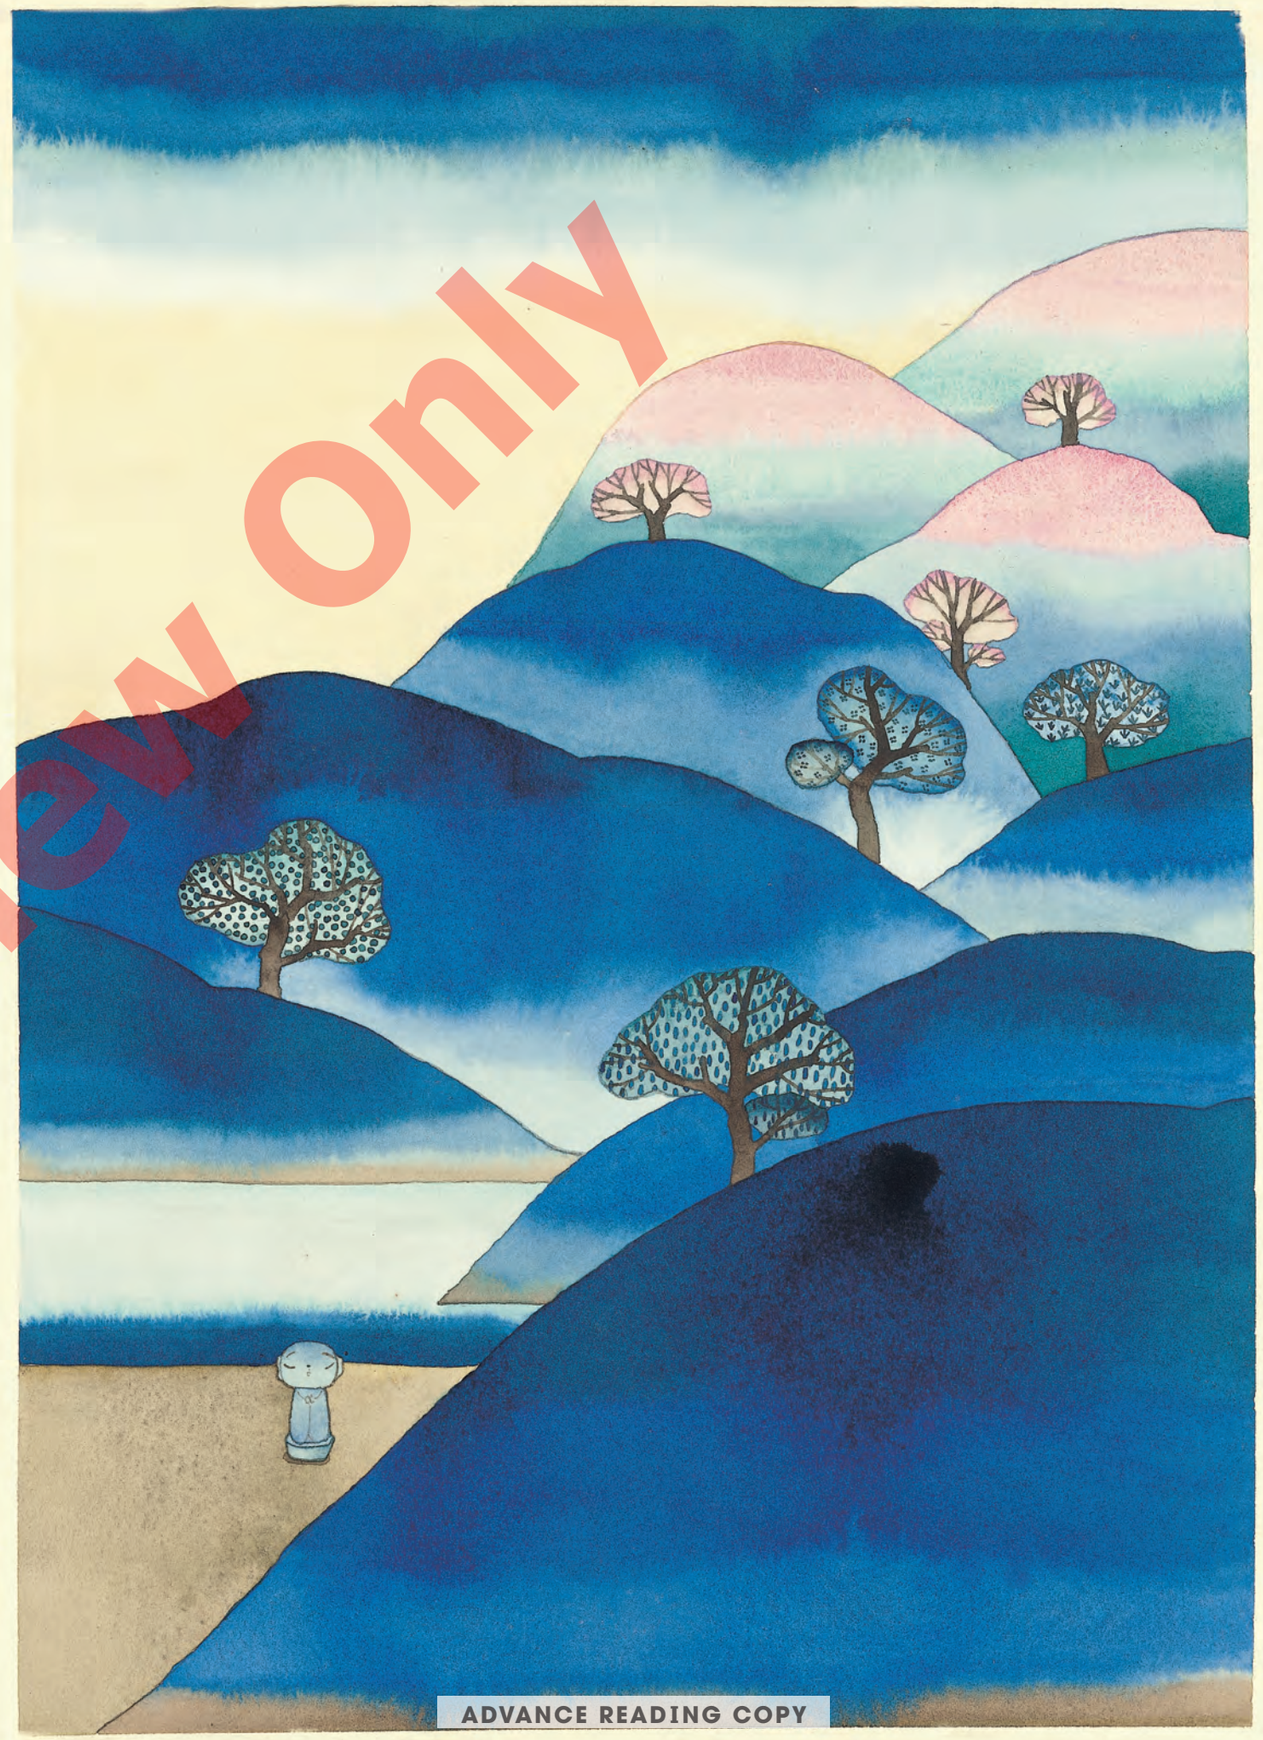

Grandpa Monkey, who had locked himself inside his house for quite some time, finally ventured outside.

"I'm going to pick some flowers for you," he said as he turned and talked to the empty room.

For Review Only

There was no one to say, "Have a safe walk!" to Grandpa Monkey anymore. The only sounds were the birds chirping in the trees.

"BE QUIET!

Don't you have other songs to sing?" Grandpa Monkey screamed. The birds were so frightened they chirped even louder and flew in different directions.

For Review Only

Grandpa Monkey could hardly catch his breath as he climbed halfway up the mountain, complaining all the way. "The mountains are getting steeper and steeper. I don't think I can climb any higher."

For Review Only

ADVANCE READING COPY

ADVANCE READING COPY