I have a neighbor whose name is Abraham. We call him Abe.

Abe is tall and strong.
Sometimes he picks me up and spins me around in the air.

One day, my little brother, Sam,
and I were playing. We saw Abe coming from the forest.
His boots were dirty.

Abe went into his house
without cleaning his boots.

“Abe, look at the floor!” said his mother. Then she swept the floor.

“How tall you are! One day you will get the ceiling dirty with your head!” she said with a laugh.

Later, Abe's mother went to the henhouse to look for eggs.

“Sam, little one, come here,”
said Abe.

“Here I am,” said Sam.
