Low Tide

It is low tide! This is your favorite time to walk the beach. Your feet sink into soft sand. Cool waves splash your legs.

Every few feet, you pick up a shell or stone.

The stones are flat and smooth.
Most shells are sharp and broken. A few are still perfect.

You slip them into your bag. The sun feels warm on your shoulders as you head home.

What Is Touching?

Skin is the largest organ in our bodies. Its millions of touch receptors connect us with the world.

Different types of receptors let us understand touch in many ways.
