Hee-haw! Yee-haw!

Billy wanted to be a cowboy. Clover the donkey was Billy's best friend. Every day they went on adventures together. They rounded up the chickens.

They chased runaway trains.

They even jumped over big canyons!

Whatever they did together, they always had great fun.

But as Billy got bigger, Clover got slower.

“You're too big to ride a donkey now!”

said Billy's dad. “You need a real horse to be a real cowboy. His name is Dash. Happy birthday, son.”

“Wow! Thanks Pop!”

Billy was thrilled. Now he could gallop and jump big hedges and go to cowboy class!

Clover was happy for Billy. But she was sad too, and a little bit worried. What if Billy didn't need her anymore?

The next day, Billy waved goodbye as he rode off to cowboy class on Dash. Clover munched her carrots sadly, waiting for Billy to come back.

She waited...

...and waited...

...and waited. But waiting was very boring and very lonely.
