The Eager Beaver

By Jenny Jinks

Illustrated by Giusi Capizzi

Barry lived in the forest with all the other animals. Barry always wanted the biggest and the best of everything.

He had the biggest teeth and the shiniest coat. He lived in the biggest dam.

“But what if my dam isn’t the biggest?” said Barry. “I will build a new dam. It will be even bigger and better.”

For Review Only

Barry worked day and night. He cut down lots of trees. Chop, chop, chop. He built the dam up high.

"That is a big dam, Barry," said Bird. "You can stop now."

But Barry was so eager he did not stop.

Barry cut down even more trees.

Chop, chop, chop.

He built the dam very wide.

"That is a very big dam, Barry," said Deer.

"You can stop now."

But Barry was so eager he still did not stop.
