Unicorn Sleepover

By Alison Donald
Illustrated by Erin Brown

Naz had always loved unicorns. She wished more than anything that she could ride one. Luckily for Naz, she saw a competition on a cereal box:

'Find a token inside to win a Unicorn Sleepover!'

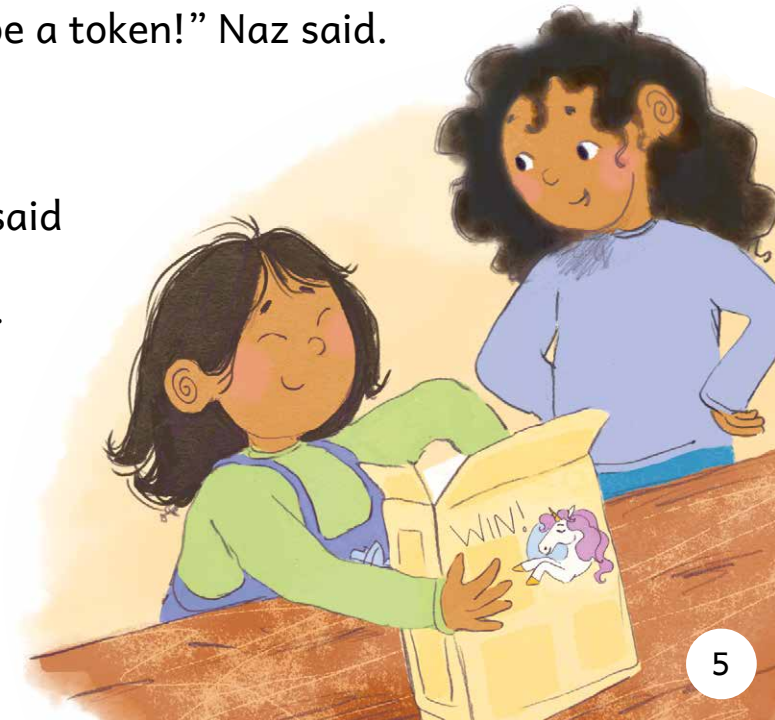

It sounded easy... but Naz had already opened nineteen boxes and she still hadn't won.

There was just one box of cereal left to open. Naz felt like she would never win, but she opened the box anyway. She dug down into the cereal.

"Please be a token!" Naz said.

"Well?" said her mum.

“Yes! I won!”

Naz had finally won a Unicorn Sleepover.

“I’m going to ride a real live unicorn!” Naz cried.

“And I’m going to eat cereal forever,” Naz’s mum sighed.

Hartford Farm was on top of a green hill.

The sign said, 'Hartford Farm – Where Dreams Come True'.

Naz wasn't the only winner. There were other girls there, and boys too.

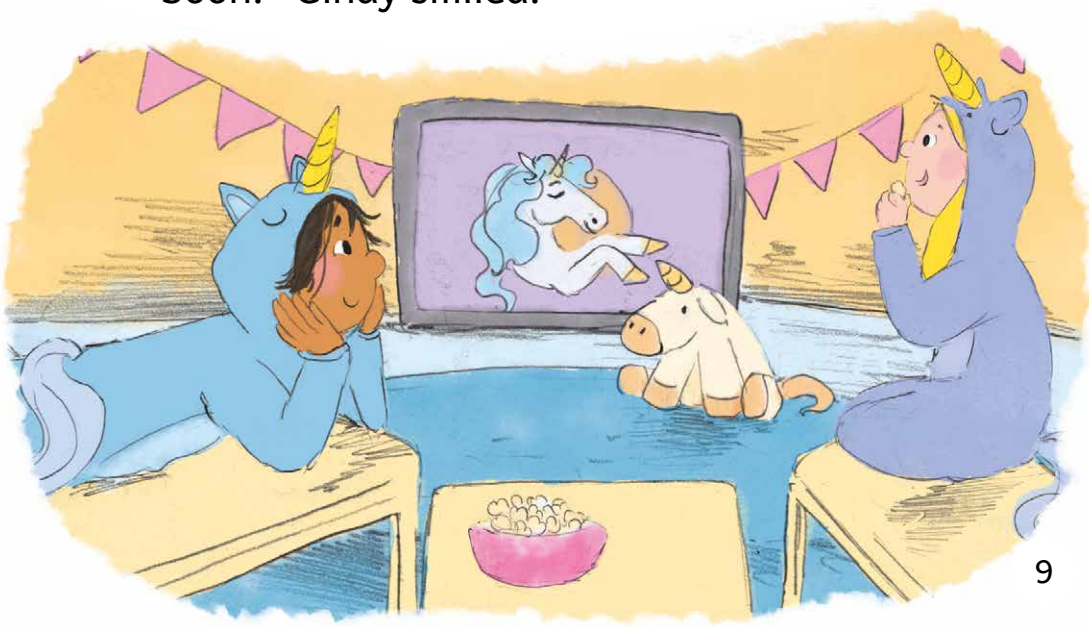

"Hello everyone! I'm Cindy, your camp counsellor. Let's get started on our sleepover!"

The fairy lights in the girls' bedroom sparkled and glowed. Everyone got changed into unicorn pyjamas. They ate popcorn in their beds and watched a unicorn movie. Naz even had a pillow fight! She was having the best time ever, but she was desperate to meet her unicorn.

"Cindy," said Naz, "when will we get to meet the unicorns?"

"Soon." Cindy smiled.
