Otto and the Storm

By Jenny Jinks

Illustrated by Gal Weizman

Otto loved having lots of arms. There was so much he could do with them. He could do a whole tap dance show by himself.

He could be a one-man band. But best of all, Otto could be helpful. He always had a free arm or two to lend a helping hand to his friends.

One day, a storm was on its way to the town.
Everyone was getting ready, making sure their houses were safe.
“Otto, can you give me a hand?” asked Angus.
“Of course,” said Otto.
Otto helped make Angus’s house safe.

The sea was beginning to get swirly.

Otto needed to get home.

“Otto, can you give me a hand?” asked Suki.

“Of course,” said Otto. He helped move Suki’s things into the shed to keep them safe.
