Pharaoh's Treasure

Amon peered into the tent. The workers were digging for Pharaoh's treasure and the tent was where they kept the things they dug up. Amon couldn't resist a peek!

On a table were some dusty pots and broken pieces of pottery. Amon looked at the strange writing on a pot and wondered who once used it. Could it have been a village boy like him? Or perhaps it had been a pharaoh? He wished he could discover objects like these too.

Suddenly, the tent flap opened. Amon dived under the table, but it was too late. He'd been spotted by Horus, the man in charge of the dig. "What are you doing here?" Horus frowned and checked everything was in order.

Amon gulped. "I was only looking," he stuttered. "I just wanted to see what had been found. A pharaoh may have drunk from that pot thousands of years ago and it hasn't been touched since. It's incredible."

Horus's frown changed to a smile.

"Ah, I see you have the treasure hunting bug. You're right, these finds are amazing. But we're still searching for one pharaoh's precious tomb and the mystery of his lost treasure."

"May I look too?" Amon's eyes gleamed.

"It's exciting to discover how people used to live years ago. Their secrets are buried beneath all that sand out there."

He gave Horus a hopeful look.
