The Wrong Pong

By Rebecca Lisle

Bertie loved being at Wizard School. He wanted to become a great wizard, so he always tried very hard.

One day, Big Wizard gave Bertie's class a new challenge.

"As you may know, Prince Casper has been asleep for a whole month," Big Wizard said. "No one can wake him, so the queen has asked us to make a magic Wake-Up Potion."

Bertie was excited. He loved making magic potions.

"And," Big Wizard continued, "the king and queen will award a gold wand to the wizard who wakes Prince Casper!"

"Oooh!" cried the wizards. They all wanted the gold wand. They hurried off to the potion room to start making their magic potions.

The wizards got to work. Bertie chose a green bottle from the cupboard. Now, to begin!

Around him, all the other wizards were hard at work. Another wizard called Sid was sitting next to Bertie. Sid really wanted that gold wand. He watched Bertie closely.

"What are you putting in your potion?" Sid asked.

"Rose petals, so it smells nice," Bertie said. "And 'wake-up' crystals, obviously!"

"Obviously!" Sid agreed, adding them to his own cauldron.
