ROMEO AND JULIET

Chorus

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge create new rivalry
That leads two star-crossed lovers to their deaths.
See now, two servants from opposing sides
Begin a brawl that will ignite this tale.

ACT ONE, SCENE ONE A STREET IN VERONA

A Capulet servant bites his thumb as a Montague servant goes by.

Montague servant

Do you bite your thumb at me?

Capulet servant

I do bite my thumb, sir.

Montague servant

But do you bite your thumb at me, sir?

Capulet servant

And if I do, sir?

Montague servant

Then you insult me, sir.

Capulet servant

And so?

Montague servant

Then draw your sword!

Capulet servant

Gladly! You dog of Montague!

Benvolio enters.

Benvolio

Put up your swords! You know not what you do!

Tybalt enters.

Tybalt

What? Fighting with servants, Benvolio?

Coward, you'll find a better foe in me!

They fight. Capulet and Montague, the heads of their respective families, arrive on the scene.

Capulet

Fetch me a sword.

My enemies are drawn against me.

Montague

You villain, Capulet!

There is a general fight. The Prince enters.

Prince

Enough! Throw down your weapons.

Hold, I say!

If ever you disturb our streets again,

Your Prince condemns you to be put to death.

Away! And leave the city streets in peace.

You, Capulet, shall go along with me,

And Montague, come you this afternoon

To hear what else I have to say.

Everyone leaves except Montague and Benvolio.

Montague

Who stirred up our old quarrel once again?

Benvolio

I came upon your servant fighting with

The servant of your enemy, my lord.

I drew my sword to part them but alas,

The fiery Tybalt with his own sword drawn

Came on the scene to urge them on.

I had to fight to save myself from him.

Came more and more to fight on either side

Until the Prince arrived and parted us.

- After the deaths of Juliet and Romeo, the two families agree to end their feud. Montague says he will erect a statue of Juliet made of gold for all the town to see. Capulet promises to do the same for Romeo.

Back in time

William Shakespeare was born in 1564 in Stratford-upon-Avon, and later went to London, where he became an actor and playwright. He was very popular in his own lifetime. He wrote thirty-seven plays that we know of, and many sonnets.

The very first theatres were built around the time that Shakespeare was growing up. Until then, plays had been performed in rooms at the back of inns or pubs. The Elizabethans loved going to watch entertainments such as bear-baiting and cock-fighting as well as plays. They also liked to watch public executions, and some of the plays written at this time were quite gruesome.

The Globe, where Shakespeare's company acted, was a round wooden building that was open to the sky in the middle. 'Groundlings' paid a penny to stand around the stage in the central yard. They risked getting wet if it rained. Wealthier people could have a seat in the covered galleries around the edge of the space. Some very important people even had a seat on the stage itself. Unlike today's theatre-goers, Elizabethan audiences were noisy, and sometimes fighting broke out.

There were no sets or scene changes in these plays. It was up to the playwright's skill with words to create thunderstorms or forests or Egyptian queens in the imagination of the audience.

Shakespeare wrote mostly in blank verse, in unrhymed lines of ten syllables with a te-tum te-tum rhythm. But unlike most writers of his time he tried to make his actors' lines closer to the rhythms of everyday speech, in order to make it sound more naturalistic. He used poetic imagery, and even invented words that we still use today.

His plays are mostly based on stories or old plays that he improved. Romeo and Juliet was probably based on a long poem called The Tragical History of Romeus and Julietta, written by Arthur Brooke in 1562, but the story is also found in a fifteenth-century book from Italy.
