The Crow and the Pot

An Aesop's Fable

Retold by Beverley Randell Illustrated by Mini Goss

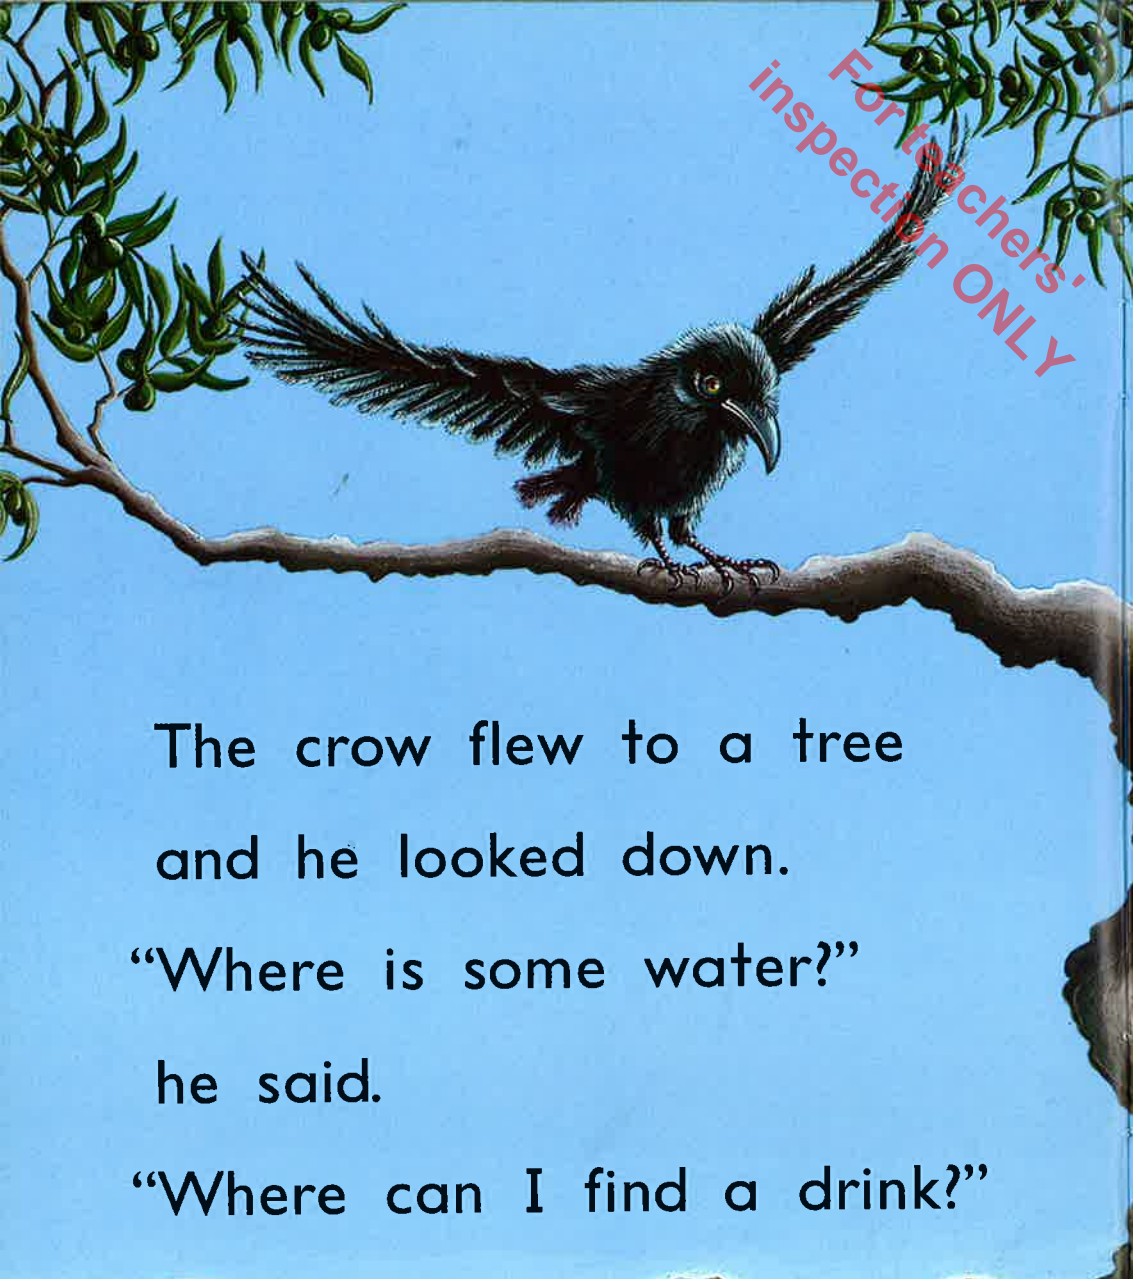

For teachers' inspection ONLY

It was a very hot day.
A big black bird called a crow
wanted to have a drink of water.

The crow flew to a tree
and he looked down.
"Where is some water?"
he said.
"Where can I find a drink?"

Then he saw a pot.

The crow flew down
from the tree
to have a good look at the pot.

Yes!
There was some water
inside it.
