The Goats in the Turnip Field

PM+

Retold by Beverley Randell
Illustrated by Isabel Lowe

For teachers' inspection ONLY

Once upon a time,
a boy was taking his goats home
along a road.

When the goats
saw a field of turnips,
they jumped over the gate.

The boy tried to chase them out of the field.

But they would not go.

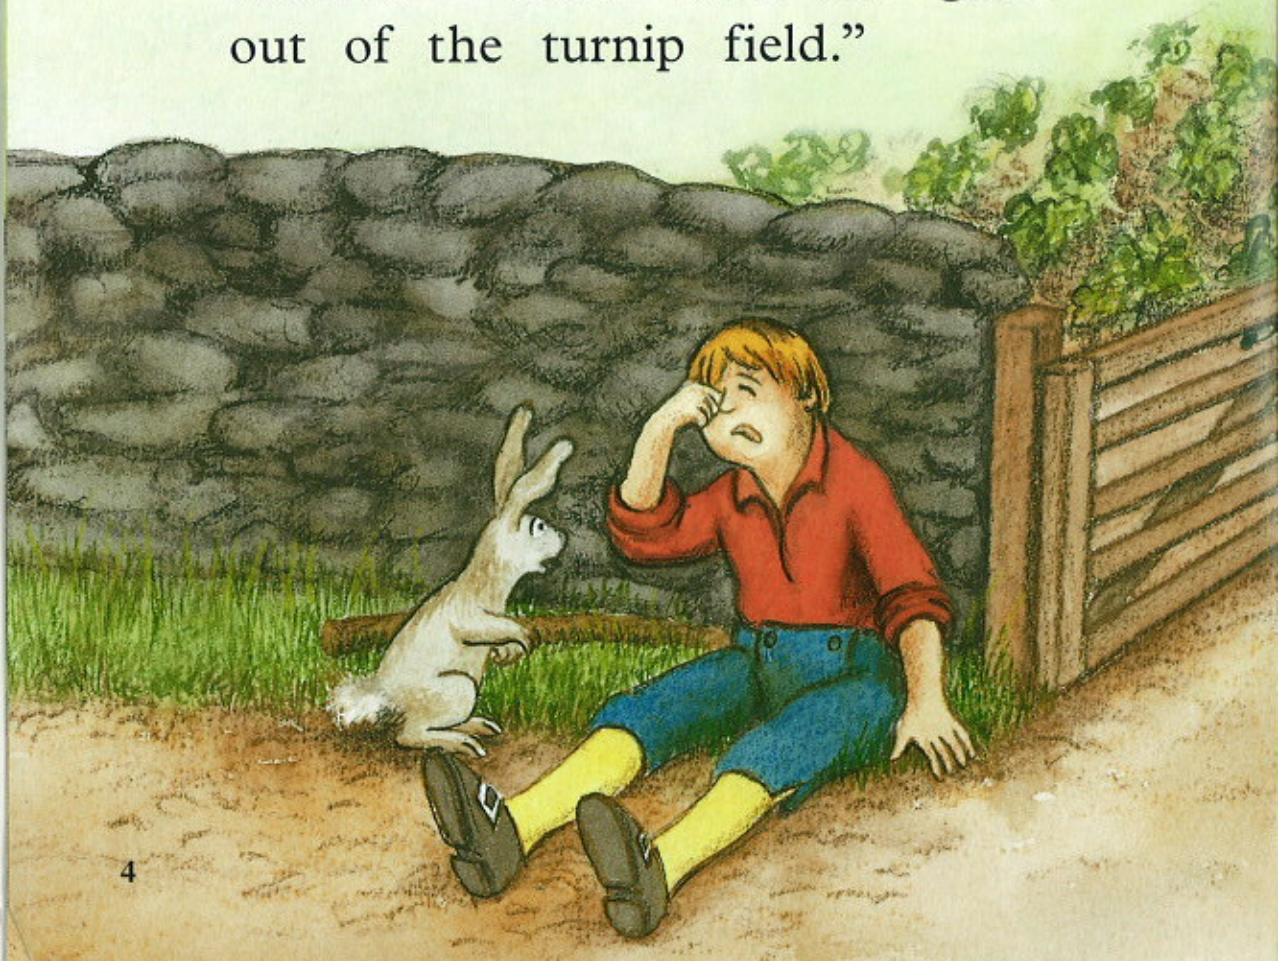

For teachers' inspection ONLY

So the boy sat down and cried.

Rabbit came along.
"Why are you crying?" he asked.

The boy said, "I'm crying because I can't chase the goats out of the turnip field."

For teachers' inspection ONLY

"I'll chase them out," said Rabbit.

But the goats would not go.

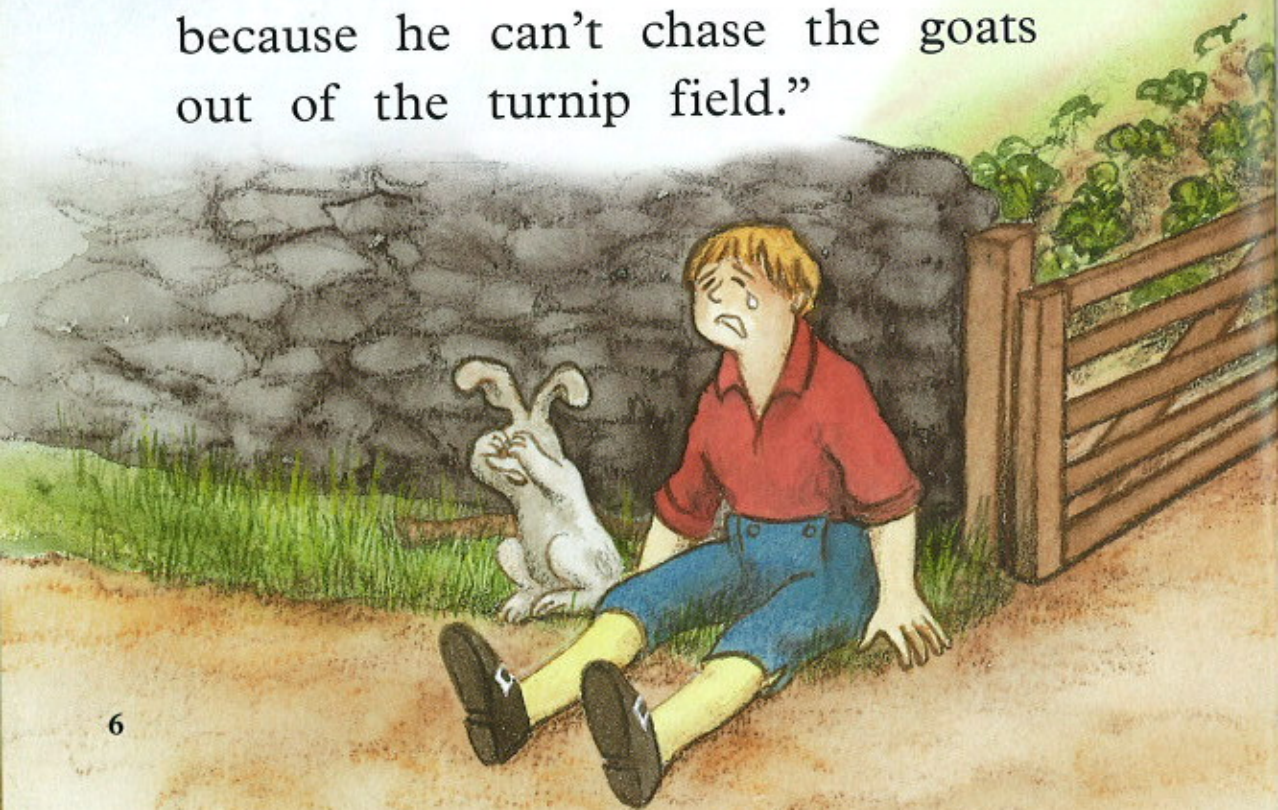

For teachers' inspection ONLY

So Rabbit sat down and cried, too.

Fox came along.
"Why are you crying?"
he asked Rabbit.

Rabbit said, "I'm crying
because the boy is crying.
He is crying
because he can't chase the goats out of the turnip field."

For teachers' inspection ONLY