The Lions and the Buffaloes
Story by Beverley Randell
Illustrations by Julian Bruère

Five little lion cubs
played together every day.
Their mothers took care of them
all the time.
They were too small
to take care of themselves.

The mother lions
always hid their cubs
under the bushes,
or under the trees,
or in the long grass
to keep them safe.

One hot day,
the mother lions
hid their cubs under some trees.
The cubs went to sleep.

Then all the big lions
went to sleep out in the sun.

Soon a herd of black buffaloes came along.
The buffaloes felt cross when they saw the lions lying in the grass.
