PM+

The Bird That Could Think

Story by Annette Smith

Illustrations by Ben Spiby

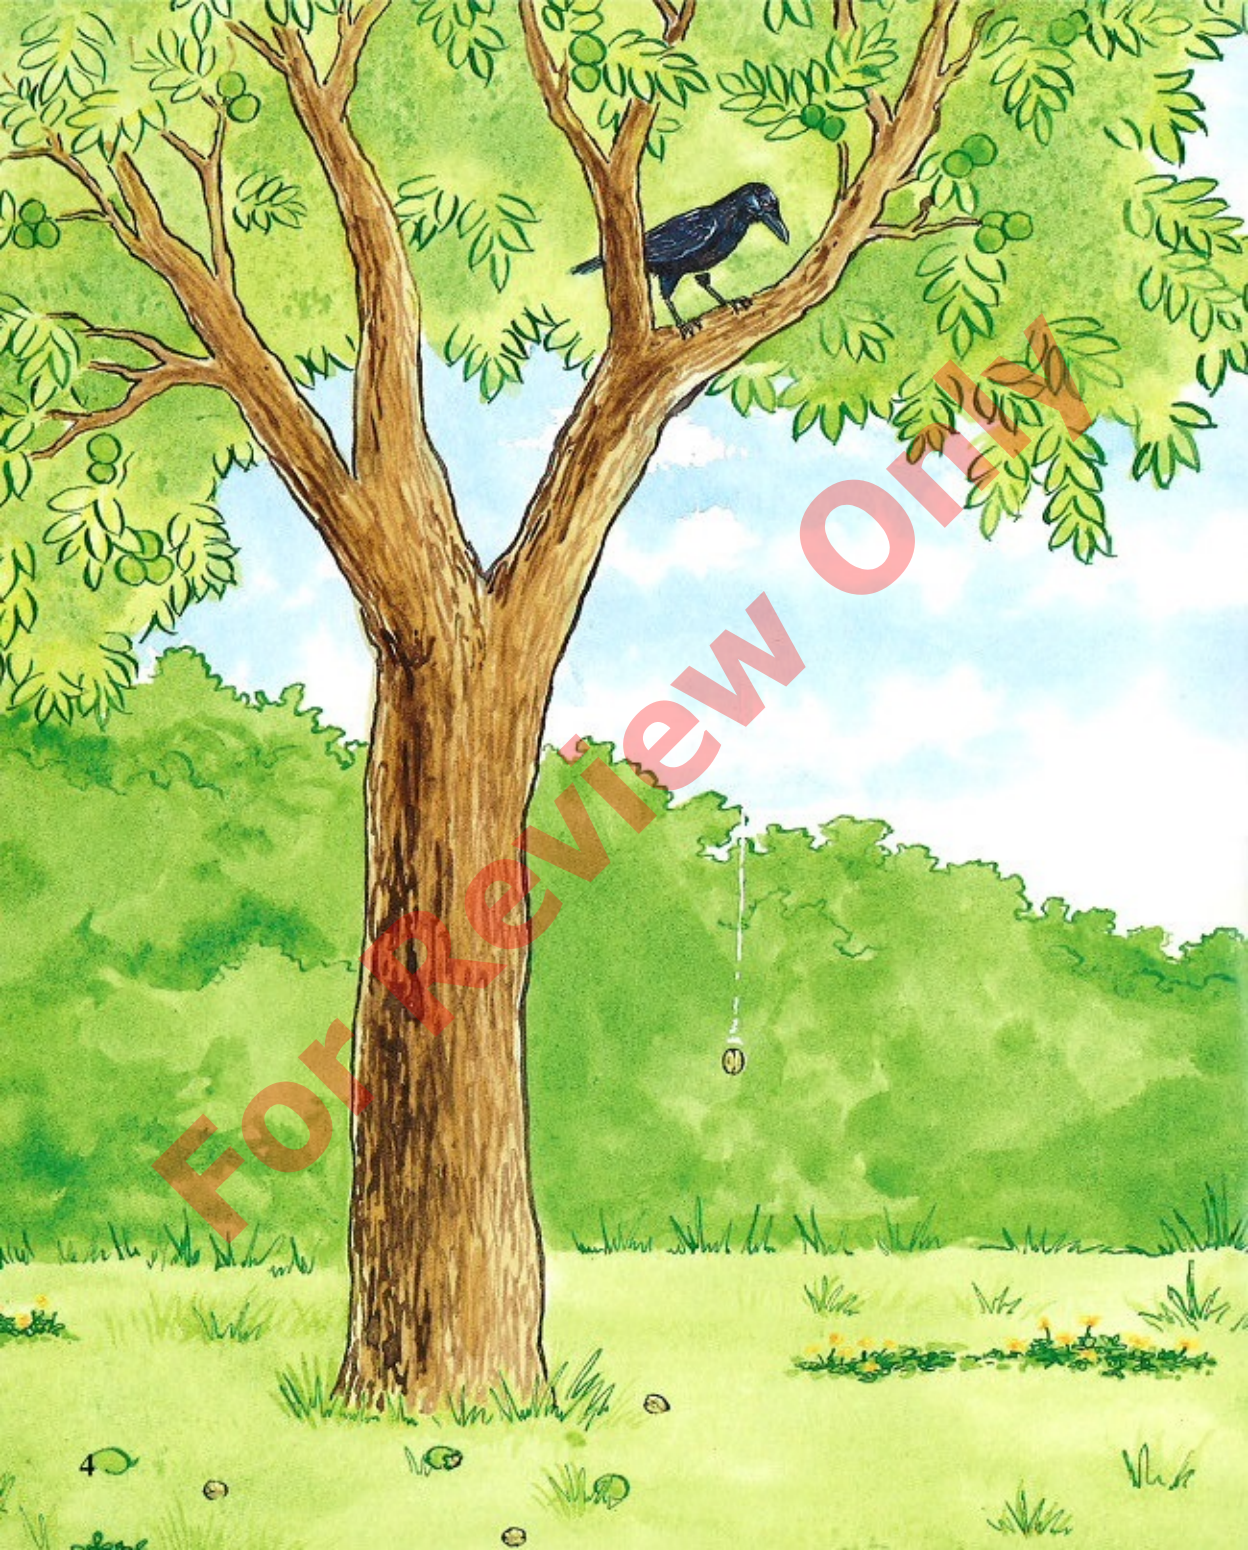

For Review Only

One day, a big black crow found some nuts under a tree.

"These nuts will be good to eat,"
said the crow to herself.
"But they do have very hard shells."

For Review Only

For Review Only

The crow picked up a nut in her beak and flew to a branch high in the tree.

She let the nut go.
It fell down onto the grass.
But it did not break open!

"The grass is too soft,"
said the crow.
"I need to find something that is much harder than grass."

For Review Only

Then the crow heard some cars going along a busy road.

"Aha!" she said.
"A road is much harder than grass.
The nut will break open,
if I drop it onto the road."

For Review Only