Chapter One

At the Television Studio

"I hope I get this part!" said Rory to his father, as they walked into the television studio. "It could be my big chance!"

Rory had been to auditions before, but today he felt nervous. He loved acting in advertisements and, so far, he'd been chosen to do a few small parts. But what he really wanted was the chance to play a leading role.

As Rory and Dad went into the waiting room, Simon, the casting agent, met them.

"Hello, Rory," he said. "It's good to see you again. Sit with the others, and I'll let you know when it's your turn."

Several other children had arrived ahead of Rory, and he knew that he was going to have a long wait. One by one, the children went into the studio to be auditioned. Rory watched them smiling happily at their parents as they left the waiting room.

"I'm getting really nervous," whispered Rory. "I don't think I've got a chance."

"You'll be just fine," smiled Dad. "It'll be your turn soon."

Just then, Simon opened the door and said, "You can come with me now, Rory."

The Audition

Rory took a deep breath and followed Simon into a big room, where a woman was adjusting a video camera.

"This is Jill," said Simon. "She's going to be directing the advertisement."

"Hello, Rory," said Jill. "Simon has told me that you're very good at acting and singing, and I've seen your last ad. You did a great job, and I'm sure you would enjoy this one. It's about a marvellous new pen called the Wobblenot. The pen has been designed to help children write quickly and neatly."

Rory laughed. "I'd like to have a pen that would help me do neater work!" he said.
