Little Red Riding Hood

Tale & Play

Retold by Jenny Giles
Illustrated by Karin Ryan

PM LIBRARY

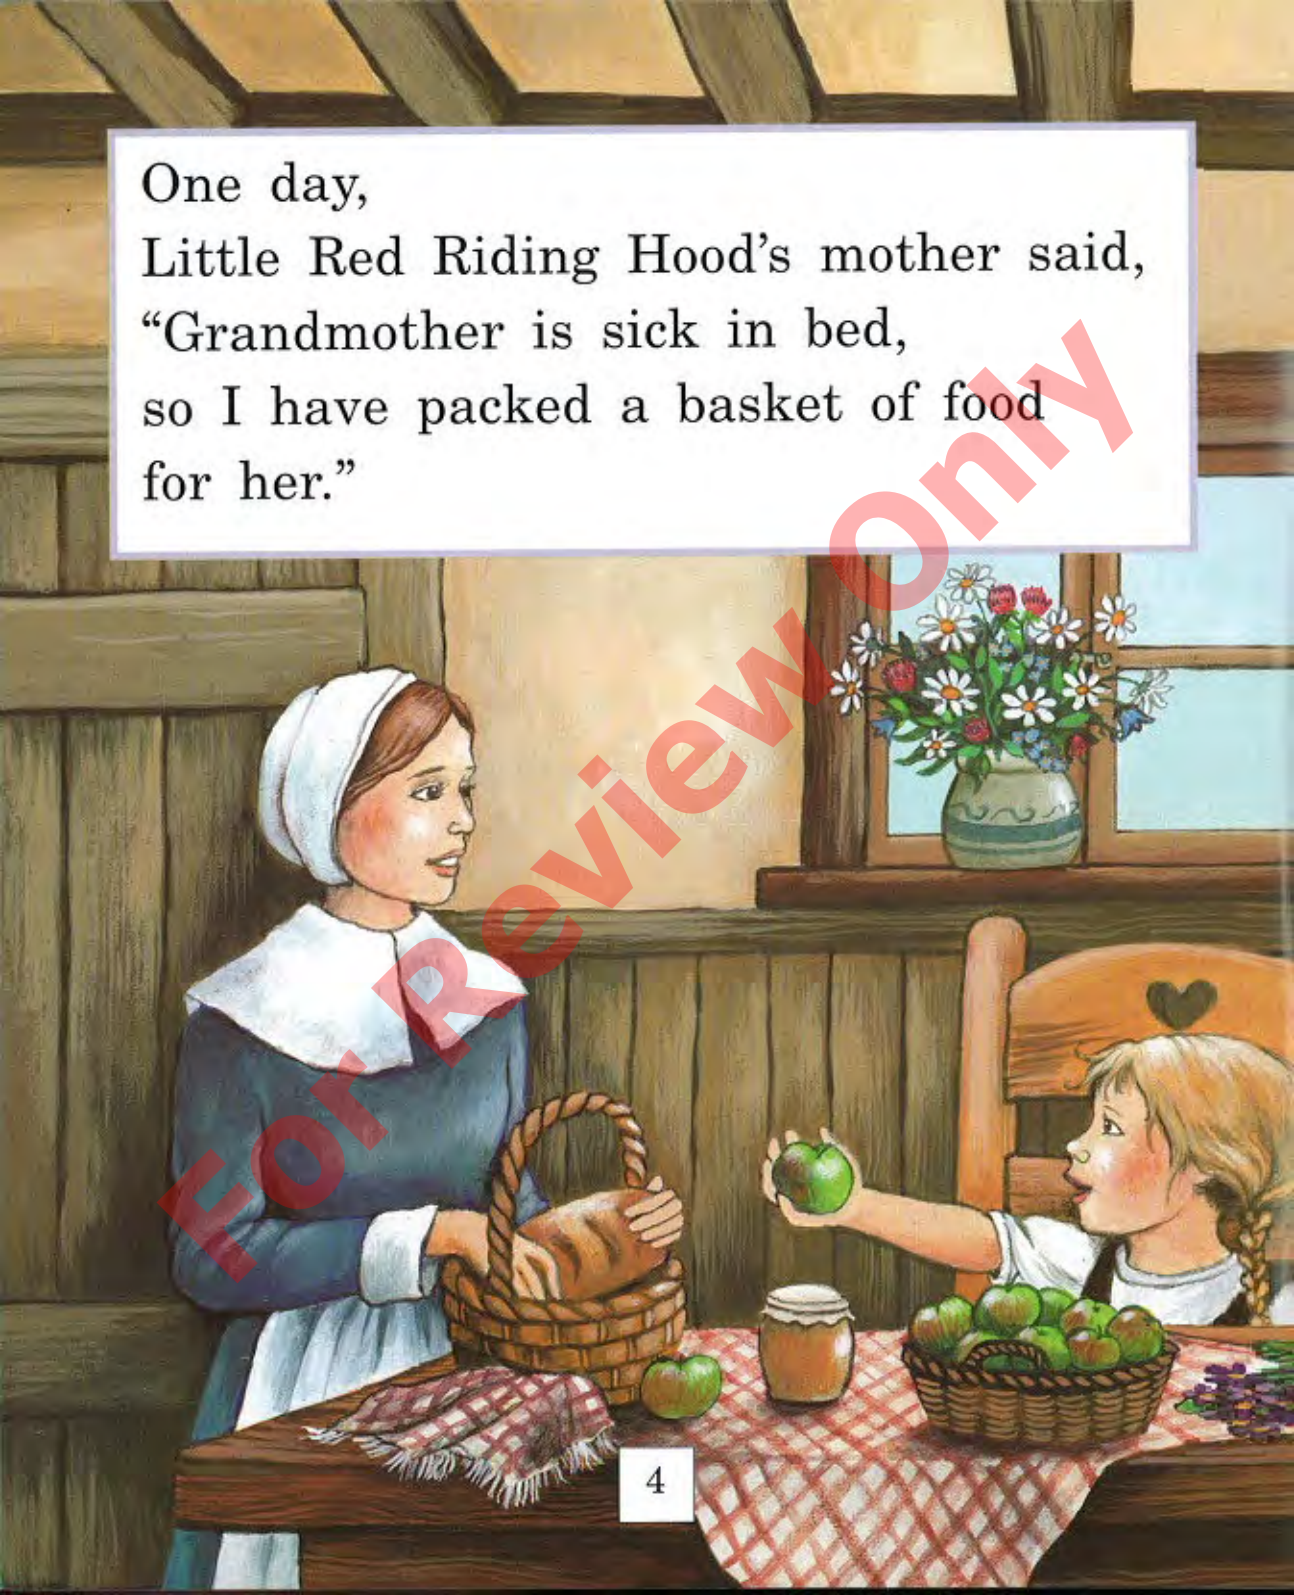

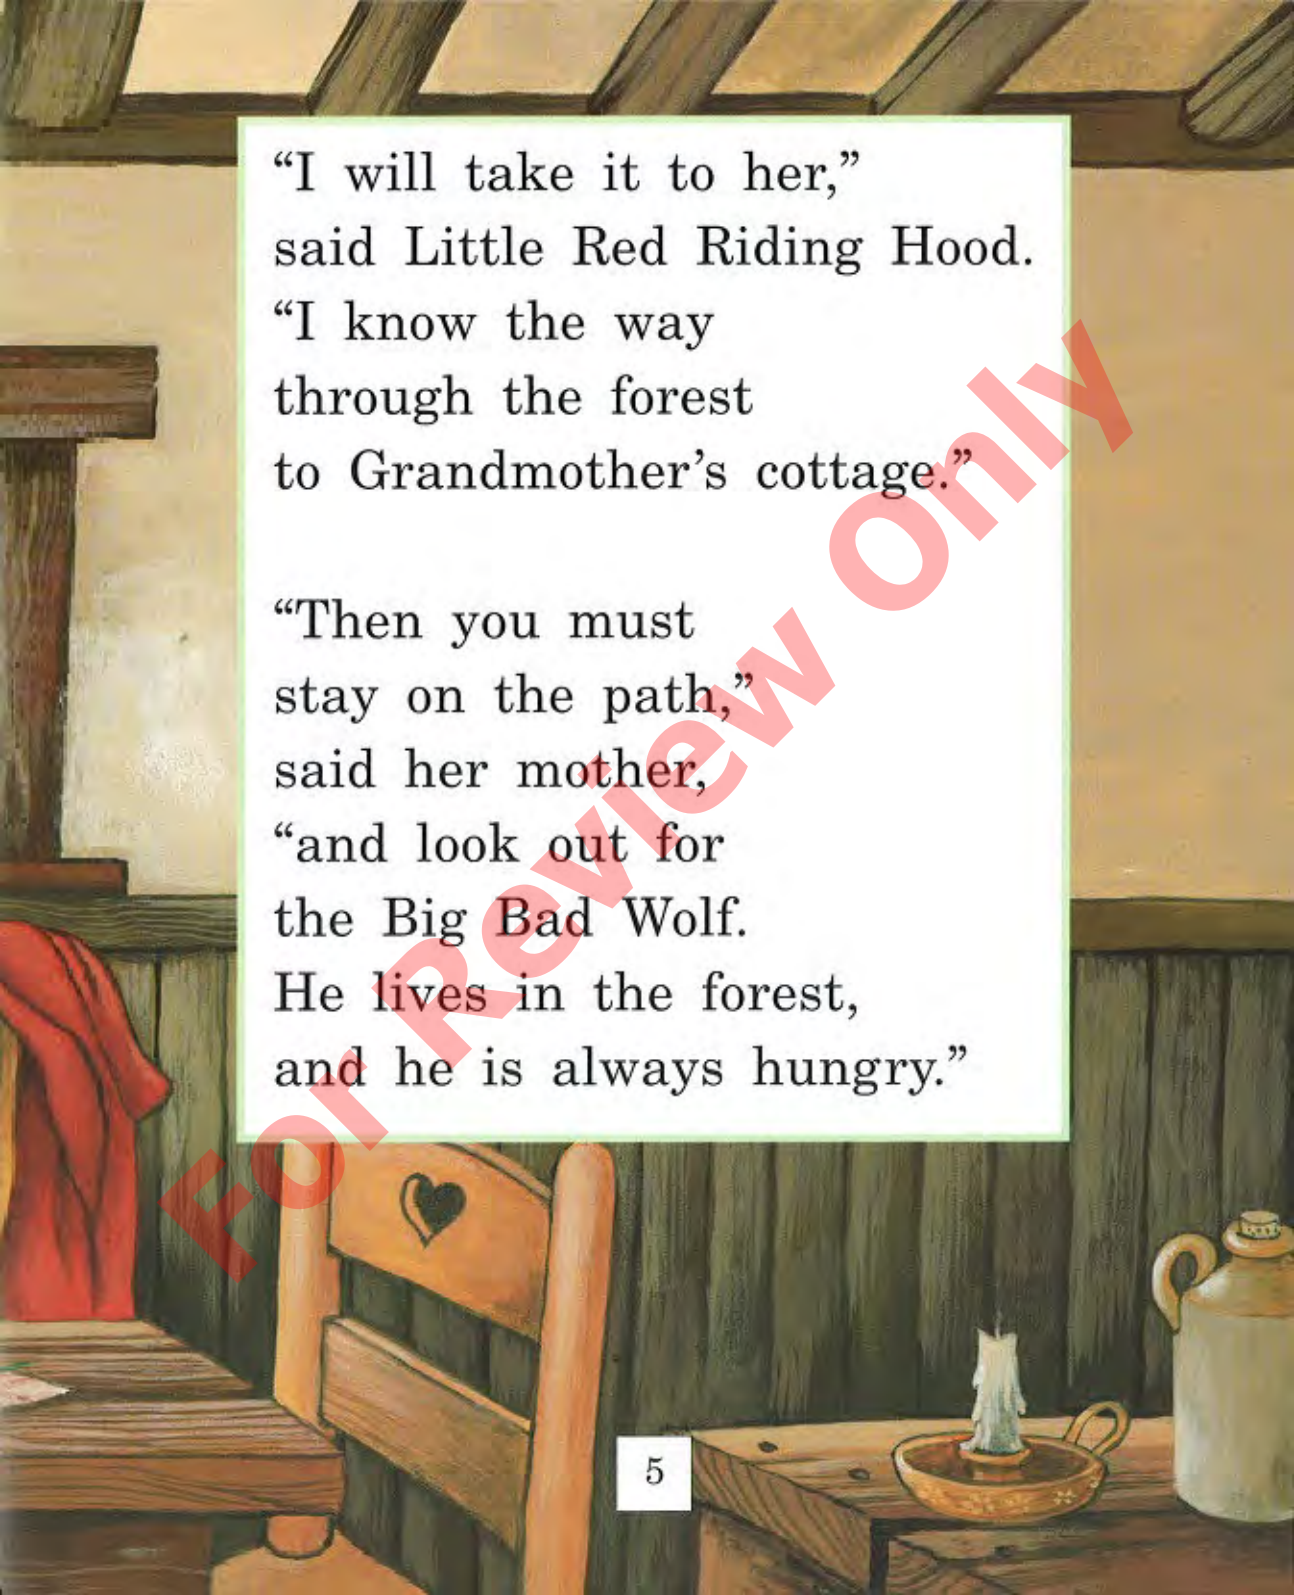

Once upon a time,
a little girl lived
with her mother and father
in a cottage by a forest.
She was called
Little Red Riding Hood
because she always wore
a beautiful cape with a red hood.

Preview Only

For Review Only

One day,
Little Red Riding Hood's mother said,
"Grandmother is sick in bed,
so I have packed a basket of food
for her."
For Review Only

"I will take it to her,"
said Little Red Riding Hood.
"I know the way through the forest
to Grandmother's cottage."

"Then you must stay on the path,"
said her mother,
"and look out for the Big Bad Wolf.
He lives in the forest,
and he is always hungry."

For Review Only

A play

Little Red Riding Hood

For Review Only

People in the play

Reader

Father

Little Red Riding Hood

Grandmother

Mother

Big Bad Wolf

Reader

Once upon a time,
a little girl lived
with her mother and father
in a cottage by a forest.
She was called
Little Red Riding Hood
because she always wore
a beautiful cape with a red hood.

One day,
Little Red Riding Hood's mother put some food into a basket.

Mother

Grandmother is sick in bed,
so I have packed a basket of food
for her.

For Review Only

Little Red Riding Hood

I will take it to her.
I know the way through the forest
to Grandmother's cottage.

Mother

Then you must stay on the path,
and look out for the Big Bad Wolf.
He lives in the forest,
and he is always hungry.

Reader

On her way through the forest,
Little Red Riding Hood
met her father,
who was cutting wood.

For Review Only